Unintended outcome of pregnancy and childbirth may be a change in bladder function as well as the anatomy of the vagina and surrounding organs. Some women may experience symptoms such as urinary incontinence and vaginal prolapse, causing undue stress and affect new mothers' quality of life.

We Can Help.

While many of these symptoms may improve with rehabilitation of the pelvic floor, a significant women sustain much trauma and long lasting bothersome symptoms. Our trained urogynecologists in the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology, Weill Cornell Medicine are exceptionally trained to help women manage through these bothersome symptoms and allow them to enjoy their new found joy in motherhood.

What is a Urogynecologist?

Urogynecologists are subspecialty trained physicians that treat pelvic floor disorders. These doctors complete an extensive fellowship training after obstetrics and gynecology residency to be board-certified in Female Pelvic Medicine and Reconstructive Surgery.

Our all-female practitioners, are dual-board certified in Obstetrics and Gynecology and Female Pelvic Medicine and Reconstructive Surgery, and hold dual appointments in the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology and Urology at Weill Cornell Medicine and NewYork-Presbyterian. They dedicate their entire clinical focus on treating women with pelvic floor disorders.

As members of the top-ranked Obstetrics and Gynecology department at Weill Cornell Medicine, our urogynecologists work with a broad team of expert clinicians to treat such complex disorders.
